Use of Label, Envelope Prevent Errors, Delays

Many simple errors that can cause weeks of delay in the processing of federal income tax returns could be avoided if taxpayers used the labels and envelopes that accompany their tax packages, the Internal Revenue Service says.

The post-off label, which contains the taxpayer's name, address and Social Security number, is designed to expedite processing at IRS service centers and prevent confusion that can delay issuance of refund checks.

A common misconception is that using the post-off label identifies the taxpayer's return audit. Actually, according to the IRS, the label addresses the taxpayer and the kind of forms contained in his or her tax package. It does not in any way indicate that the return should be audited.

One of the common and yet most troublesome errors that can be avoided by use of the label is the listing of an incorrect or illegible Social Security number. If the error can take weeks or even months to correct, according to the IRS, and the taxpayer must wait for a refund check.

The IRS advises taxpayers to use the label, even if corrections are necessary. If such is the case—due to a change of address, for example—the correction should be made directly to the IRS.

Errors can also be averted if taxpayers use the special pre-addressed envelopes for filing their tax returns during the annual deluge of mail that arrives at the IRS service centers.
